AN ALPINE CLIMBER.

How a Girl Distinguished Herself on New Year's Day.

By CLARA A. BURTON.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"An odd New Year's, but a grand one," thought Marcia Wells as she paused for a moment on a spur of the Alps and gazed down upon what seemed the world outspread before her.

Five years she had been traveling now into many remote parts of the world—studying, investigating, exploring—a strong, self confident and courageous girl from the first, and gaining experience and new ambitions with her progress until now, at the end of only five years, she was gaining a reputation as a mountain climber, a student explorer, a writer of travels.

But there was no exultation in her eyes as they looked out across the world, dwarfed by height and distance.

With the conquering of obstacles was coming a broader, more earnest purpose in life that was above personality, and, moreover, over this day was a shadow that made even the conquering of the great heights of ambition seem trivial and small.

Even as they started up the mountain they had passed a white faced guide with a story of his party being caught by a snowslide and carried over a precipice. He was the only one saved and had been swept many rods down the mountain side and saved himself only at the very brink of the precipice by cutting the connecting rope.

The severed bit of cord still dangled from his waist, overlooked and forgotten in the horror of the catastrophe.

And among the party were friends and acquaintances of Marcia Wells met with on her travels. They had started to climb the very mountain she was going up, and by rapid progress she had hoped to meet them somewhere near the top.

And now all that was left was the guide, stumbling and slipping down the mountain, white faced, hatless and disheveled.

They had listened to his story, their own faces whitening, but nothing could be done, so Marcia Wells had said she would go on and climb the mountain as planned.

They were now more than two-thirds of the way up, and Marcia Wells was standing upon a narrow shelf of the spur, so narrow that only her heels held, with her toes projecting over, but her face was calm and her nerves steady.

Many times had she been in such places before. On either side were the guides, grasping the rope which secured them together and holding it taut to assist her in rounding the almost sheer wall of the spur.

But for a long time she stood there gazing, then slowly, inch by inch, for that was the only way, she continued to edge her way across.

"The signorina would better have taken the other route," the advance guide said anxiously, "and even now it will be easier to go back. This way is shunned even by the more reckless of the guides."

"It is the way the other party went," Marcia answered briefly. "Maybe it was a mistake on their part, but it is too late to change that now. They started this way and were intending to scale the sheer wall beyond, the guide told us. It must have been near here that the slide struck them. Doubtless, from his story, they all perished, but until we have absolute proof to the contrary there is a chance they did not. It is for us to find out. Ah!"

The exclamation was a startled one, and she raised a curved palm above her eyes in quick inquiry and gazed long and earnestly into the depths below.

"Henri," she called quickly, "you and Fritz tighten the rope and hold it firmly against the wall of the rock. I am going to lean out far enough to see over that bulge yonder, and the rope must sustain me."

Both of the guides whitened.

"It may be death," gasped Henri in remonstrance. "It is dangerous as you are now, and if you lean out your heels may slip, and then—and then you will go down and drag us with you. It may be death."

"It may be life for the ten persons the snow carried over. I do not know, but there is the edge of something dark just over the bulge of rock, and I thought I saw it stir. You may hold your knives ready, and if I fall you can cut the rope quickly and save yourselves. Now!"

They pressed the rope sharply against the rock wall behind and braced themselves as firmly as possible to hold it from slipping or swaying. Marcia, without even looking at them again, leaned out, and out, and out, until only the rope sustained her weight, her heels resting against the narrow shelf keeping her in position. Then, after what seemed an endless suspense to the men at the end of the rope, her hand motioned for them to draw her back to her footing.

"Yes, it is the party," she said as she regained her balance, "and some of them are alive. We must go down to them."

"But the rope is not long enough," both guides protested in a breath, "and we cannot"—

"Yes; I think we can," Marcia said, "or at least we can try. There are several fissures large enough for our heels to grasp. One of us will stay here, another be let down to a fissure as far as the rope will reach, and so on. There are three of you guides and myself. Four lengths of the rope will reach down to the party, I think. You have plenty of strong twine, and that can be used to draw the rope up from shelf to shelf as the party are rescued."

"A girl could never draw a heavy body up this wall," fearfully, "and—and if the rope should slip away and be lost"—

"We will take that risk. And I shall be strong enough to draw them up. I have done such things before. Now, Henri," as she worked her way along the shelf to his side and motioned for the other guides to follow, "you will stay here and lower the rest of us to the next fissure, then fasten the twine to the rope and let it down for Fritz to lower Gaspard and myself to the next fissure; then Gaspard will lower me, and I will fasten the rope to some rock projection, or if I cannot find one I will drill a hole in the rock and drive in a spike.

"Then I will go down hand over hand and see if any of the party are able to help themselves.

"If they are, I will climb back to my fissure and draw them up, or perhaps some of them will be able to help me. If not, I will have to go down to fasten each one separately, then climb back and draw him up.

"And, now, mind, all of you," her voice ringing sharp, "there must not be a hand to tremble or an eye to waver. On each of us the lives of all will depend."

"Perhaps one of us men would better go down to the lowest fissure," hesitated Henri.

"No; I will go myself. I can do the work better, I think, and my muscles have been trained for and by such work. It may be the entire party are alive and we can save them all."

They started to follow the plan the girl had laid down. Marcia, having assumed the leadership, naturally took it upon herself to be the first one lowered.

The rope having been fastened about her waist, she was lowered to the fissure below. The distance was not great, but only a steady pair of eyes, swinging, as she did, over a giddy height, could have enabled her to maintain her equanimity.

Having reached the fissure, she unbound the rope. It was drawn up, and Fritz was next lowered, then Gaspard.

When the three were ready to go a step lower Marcia, still taking the lead, was lowered to the next fissure, and Gaspard followed.

It was now Marcia's part to do the rest alone.

But this step was more dangerous than the others, for there was but one pair of arms to bear her weight, and the distance was greater than either of the two former descents.

The brave girl made a loop at the end of the rope, and, instead of having it placed about her waist, took it in her hands that she might drop whatever distance the rope would not reach.

And so, swinging by her two hands, she was lowered to the rope's full length.

There still remained six feet between her and a rocky projection on which there was a surface as many feet square. She called to Gaspard to move three feet to the left. He did so, and she called again to him to move two feet farther in the same direction. Then she told him to swing her gently to and fro from the cliff. When directly over the proper place she let go and safely landed on the rock.

Tying the end of the rope around a point of rock, she completed her journey.

It was only after a day and night and another day of such hardihood and daring as was told at the inns and chalets for many a long year that the work was finished.

Even the guides, fired by the example of Marcia and perhaps also by solicitude for the other guides of their party, seemed to be unconscious of fear and hunger and weariness.

When at the end of the second day they reached the foot of the mountain the rescuers were almost as exhausted as the party they had saved, and from the palms of Marcia Wells' hands nearly all the skin had been worn by the rope.

But three days later, although her hands were still bandaged, she said goodby to the rest of the party and started off to begin the new year in quest of another mountain to climb.

Her Husbands.

It is said that before a man has discovered the color of a girl's eyes she is planning her trousseau and leading him to the altar—but—

The bachelor girls' destination necessitated their going through Woodlawn cemetery, a portion of the city they had never before visited. They stopped for a long time on the bridge which crosses the lake to admire the wonderfully well kept banks, which slope down to the edge of the lake, with here and there some artistically arranged shrubbery serving as a background. As they cast a last look at the island, situated at one end of the lake, which is so tiny one wonders how the large willow tree standing at the water's edge, with its drooping branches hanging so low that they sweep backward and forward in the water with the wind, could possibly have grown there, one of the bachelor girls was heard to remark to her companion, "Wouldn't this be an ideal place to bury one's husbands and come and weep over their graves!"—New York Press.

Minstrelsy In Bostonese.

"Mistah Howjames, may I ahsk yo' to point out de distinction 'tween a Roman stoic philosophah an' a metrical narration in lofty an' impressive style of some great historical event, de same being a paht of de scholastic co'se prescribed in our institutions of learnin'?"

"No, Mr. Ticklowell; I confess my inability to discern the points of differentiation. Will you set forth categorically the reason or reasons why a Roman stoic philosopher should not be confounded with a lofty and impressive metrical narrative of some great historical, mythological or imaginary event, legend or tradition, et cetera?"

"Yes, suh; de one am Epictetus, an' de uddah am an epic taught us."

"Ladies and gentlemen, I have the pleasure of announcing that the renowned scholar and essayist, Professor Wendell Osgoodson, will recite at this stage of the proceedings his celebrated monologue on 'The Apotheosis of the Ephemeral.'"—Chicago Tribune.

Two Battles.

Porfirio Diaz gained national prominence and won his spurs at the battle of Puebla, where the Liberal forces made a gallant but ineffectual stand against the French, who had invaded Mexico for the purpose of erecting a throne for Maximilian. Notwithstanding the fact that the Mexican forces were defeated, their defense against superior numbers was so gallant that the anniversary of the battle of the 5th of May became a national holiday in Mexico.

A brusque American once asked Diaz, "Why do you Mexicans celebrate a defeat when you know that the French took Puebla?"

President Diaz, with a twinkle in his eye, replied, "Perhaps we have imitated the Americans even to the extent of celebrating our defeats, for I have been told that the British defeated the colonists at Bunker Hill, and yet you built a monument to commemorate the event."

Danger of Poor Teeth.

Just what effect on the stomach is produced by the constant swallowing bacteria and pus from diseased teeth, mingled with decomposing particles of food, we are unable to determine, but it is reasonable to suppose that gastric disturbances are greatly aggravated if not induced by so doing. In every community there are those who are enthusiasts on the subject of pure air and wholesome food, but whose mouths are in such a neglected condition that the air which passes through them is almost as polluted as that of a crowded tenement, and every mouthful of food swallowed carries with it to the stomach millions of bacteria. The almost entire futility of sterilizing articles of diet for patients in whose mouth chronic abscesses exist or whose teeth are covered with tartar mixed with mucus and food in a state of decomposition need hardly be mentioned.—Boston Herald.

Four Kinds of Pupils.

The Talmud says there are four kinds of pupils—the sponge and the funnel, the strainer and the sieve. The sponge is he who taketh up everything, and the funnel is he who taketh in at this ear and letteth out at that; the strainer is he that letteth go the wine and retaineth the dross, and the sieve is he that letteth go the bran and retaineth the fine flour. The student who begins at least to wish to belong to the last named class will not have been sent to college in vain.

He Liked It.

Wife—How do you like my new hat? Husband—The idea of paying big prices for— Wife—Big prices! Why, I made it myself. Husband—Um—yes—er—as I was saying, the idea of paying big prices for such monstrosities as the milliners are showing! Now, your hat is a work of art. Looks as if it came from Paris. Beautiful, my dear!

Pin Money.

Mrs. Brideley—Reggie, dear, you know that $50 you gave me for a new hat? Mr. B.—Yes, dear. Mrs. B.—Well, I've saved the money. Mr. B.—But I see you're wearing a new hat Mrs. B.—Yes; in order to economize, as you suggested, I kept the $50 and had the hat charged.—Lippincott's.

In Politics.

Politician — Congratulations, Sarah. I've been elected. Sarah (with delight)—Honestly? Politician—What difference does that make?—Milwaukee Journal.

Truthfulness consists less in stating true facts than in conveying a true impression.—Stevenson.

A Pig Tale.

The southern negro who is not possessed of a pig considers himself poor indeed. This is well known to the white people, so that when an ancient darky approached a white neighbor with the request that he "gib him er half er dollar ter help buy er pig, case dat yuther pig Ah had is done daid," the desired amount was promptly forthcoming.

A few days later the white man met the old negro and inquired:

"Did you get another pig, uncle?"

"Deed Ah did, sah, an' hit am a fine shoat, an' Ah sholy am much obleeged to you fer helpin' me, Mars Tom."

"Well, take better care of this one," Mars Tom suggested. "By the way," he added idly, "what did the other pig die of—cholera?"

The old man pulled his forelock and smiled deprecatingly.

"Now, Mars Tom, what for yo' all wanter ax dat?" he said. "Foh a matter er fac', dat yuther pig died 'case Ah hit him on de haid wid er ax, he bein' fat an' de wedder jest right, an' me bein' hongry for fresh meat!"—New York Times.

A Creepy Experience.

The Rev. Clarence Godfrey on retiring one night determined that he would try to "telepath" a phantasm of himself to a lady living in another part of the city, tells H. Addington Bruce in Success Magazine. For about ten minutes he endeavored in thought to appear to her. At the end of that time he fell asleep.

About four hours later the lady on whom he had been "exerting his will" awoke with an impression that she had heard a curious sound. She felt nervous and uneasy and thought that if she went downstairs and took a drink of soda water it might have a quieting effect.

Coming back, she was astounded to see the form of Mr. Godfrey standing on the staircase. He remained standing there for three or four seconds, while she stared at him in horrified amazement. Then as she approached the staircase he disappeared.

Right or Wrong!

Professed politicians who have reduced officeholding to an exact science find the independent voter a sad stumbling block, a fact which is amusingly disclosed by a story found in the life of the late George Monro Grant, the eminent Canadian educator and clergyman.

Toward the end of Sir John Macdonald's life he and Principal Grant, then the head of Queen's college, met at dinner at the house of the premier's brother-in-law, Professor Williamson.

"How I wish," the premier said to the principal, "that you would be a steady friend of mine."

"My dear Sir John," the principal replied, "I have always supported you when you were right."

The premier's eyes twinkled, and he laid his hand upon the shoulder of the principal.

"My dear man," said he, "I have no use for that species of friendship."

Spoiled the Trick.

A New York official who had gone through a political campaign, speaking of trickiness, said: "The tricky man usually winds up by being too tricky, like Brown.

"Brown, who lives in Fifth avenue, suspected his English butler of drinking his wine. So one night he drugged a couple of bottles of four or five dollar Chateau Yquem and left them in the dining room.

"Unfortunately that night Brown's wife returned late from the opera. She saw the rare wine and had it put down in the wine cellar along with the twelve dozen other bottles of Chateau Yquem that Brown had laid in.

"Brown is wondering to this day which two bottles are the drugged ones. He has stopped drinking Chateau Yquem. In fact, I understand his whole stock of it is for sale at a reasonable price."—Exchange.

Truth and Fiction.

At the Lambs club one night were a number of literary men as dinner guests, when some one gave utterance to the bromidiom:

"After all, gentlemen, truth is stranger than fiction."

"Perhaps it is," said Wilton Lackaye, with a sly glance at an Indiana novelist, "but not so successful. One never hears of its going into the tenth edition in six months."—New York Tribune.

An Advance.

Clerk (to head of firm)—I wish to ask you, sir, if you can kindly see your way to giving me an advance of wages? Head of Firm—Certainly, Mr. Phipps, with pleasure. Mr. Blunt (turning to the cashier), let Mr. Phipps have a sovereign on account of his salary and deduct it when you pay him on Saturday.—London Fun.

Sure Sign.

Nellie—Do you think Paul cares for Mamie? Emma—Did you ever hear a young man refer to a red haired girl as having auburn tresses unless he loved her?—Exchange.

An Anxious Inquiry.

When little three-year-old Ada was told the story of Lot's wife being turned into a pillar of salt she asked her mother anxiously, "Is all salt made of ladies?"

Different.

Larry—My wife went away yesterday morning. Harry—Is that what makes you look so glum? Larry—No. She came back last night.—Exchange.

A CHRISTMAS BILL.

Dot Was Very Much Worried as to How It Was to Be Paid.

By MARY A. BOWERS.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"Two dollars a visit!" cried Dot in dismay, forgetting entirely that she had come to look for a spool of No. 40 in mamma's drawer, and opening her brown eyes wider and wider as she read the heading of an old bill of Dr. Cogswell's.

"Two dollars a visit!" she repeated. "Oh, why doesn't Donnie get well? And where is all the money to come from?" she asked herself sadly. "We will get very poor," continued Dot, shaking her little brown head slowly over the bill. After thinking awhile she slipped the paper in her pocket and went downstairs.

Mamma and Sister Margie were sewing. Dot went quietly to Mrs. Ladyard and whispered:

"We'll feel very poor afterward, won't me, mamma?"

Mamma smiled—a sad smile, Dot thought—as she replied: "You're better at guessing than we supposed. Now, why don't you take your trimming, little daughter, and go into the library? There's a nice fire on the hearth, and you can work away like a bee. We'll need it soon, you know," added mamma, for Dot was rather inclined to dream when she was alone.

"We'll need it soon," repeated Dot as she climbed up in the big library chair. "We'll need it soon. Oh, why didn't they tell me? Way did they leave me to find it out for myself? I might have worked yards and yards by this time and sold them for ever so much, but I supposed it was just to give me something to do, and I've sometimes not done more than one scallop in a whole afternoon," confessed Dot as she made her little ivory needle fly in and out of her work, as if any one could ever make up for time wasted.

Tom went into the barn to clean his gun. Dot saw him.

"I'll ask him," she decided as she put her work hurriedly in a little silk

"I'M GOING TO HAVE MY BILL SETTLED TODAY."

handkerchief and started with it for the barn. "He won't tease me when he knows how badly I feel."

It was a very sad little face that peered in at the barn door.

"Hello!" was Tom's greeting. "Been crying?"

"Yes," admitted Dot in a voice that could leave no doubt of it.

"What's up?" asked Tom as he rubbed away at his gun. "Want any help?"

"Oh, yes, Tom. That's just what I've come for. Won't you talk real sober with me?"

"Nary a smile from me," said Tom. Then, glancing sidelong at the little face in the doorway, he added: "Come in and state your case. Here's a seat on the hay," as he lifted her gently upon a pile he had just brought down for the horses. "There! Are you cold?"

"Not a bit," said Dot.

"All right, then. Go ahead," said Tom cheerfully.

"Well, you know, Tom," began Dot in her sweet, timid voice, "there's a secret in there," pointing toward the house, "and I never found it out till this morning."

"So you found it out, did you? Well, I told 'em you would."

"I wouldn't but for the bill."

"You wouldn't what?" asked Tom, who was rubbing away again.

"I'll tell you about that afterward. When I went into the sitting room mamma and Margie were sewing."

"That certainly didn't surprise you!" laughed Tom.

"Oh, Tom! How can you make fun of it all? Mamma looked just ready to cry, and—oh, oh, oh! What can we ever do about it?" as she threw herself face downward on the hay and sobbed as though her little heart would break, while Tom stood by in speechless astonishment.

"Does she know, after all?" he asked himself. "I mustn't forget my promise to mother, but I must give the child some comfort," he thought as he went over to the little blue nook on the hay.

"Come, Dot," said he tenderly. "Don't cry. You haven't told me yet what the matter is. Now, we'll sit right up here while you tell Tom all about it."

After awhile Dot managed to say:

"Does Dr. Cogswell charge people who are ill $2 every time he goes to see them?"

"Something like that, I believe," answered Tom wonderingly.

"It's exactly that," said Dot, feeling for the bill. "Oh, Tom, we must owe him hundreds of dollars!"

There was a queer look in Tom's eyes.

"I suppose we do," he said.

"But have we got the money to pay him?" questioned Dot, the brown eyes swimming again.

"No; I don't believe we have."

"Then what are we going to do?" said Dot, with another sob.

"There, Dot," said Tom soothingly. "Don't be so foolish as to cry. It's all coming out right. I can't tell you just now, but take my word for it."

"Tom," called Mrs. Ledyard, "they're all waiting for you."

"The boys have come, Dot," said Tom, giving her a hasty kiss. "Now, remember not to worry. It's coming out all right."

Dot sat a long time on the hay.

"Tom always thinks everything's going to come out all right," she said, determined to be miserable. "He doesn't know anything about money. Margie says so, and I know myself he doesn't, 'cause I once owed him 5 cents for weeks, and then when I went to pay him he'd forgotten all about it and said I must have dreamed it.

"He's gone off now to sleigh ride and doesn't care how hard we're all working," and the little needle flew faster than ever. "I just know he thinks Dr. Cogswell isn't going to charge, but he is, for here's one bill, and he's probably got another all ready.

"He could just as well not charge," she went on, "for Edith Olcott told me he was ever and ever so rich and that he's got a house in the city even prettier than this. But how could one be?" she wondered. "How could any room be lovelier than the one Mrs. Crane took Edith and me into the other day, the little one with the window looking on the lake, and the little bed with curtains and everything blue, carpet and all? Dr. Cogswell calls it his little sister's room, and she's coming in the spring."

The little fingers never did better work than that day, for "mamma wouldn't have told me they needed it if they didn't," Dot kept assuring herself. "Tom just wanted to comfort me. He doesn't know how hard they are working and crying."

That night Dot added to her prayer the words, "O God, please don't let it be more than we can pay!"

"Let what?" asked mamma as she tucked her in bed.

"The doctor's bill," whispered Dot, her arms very tight about Mrs. Ledyard's neck.

Mrs. Ledyard smiled. She thought Dot was half asleep, so she tiptoed quietly downstairs to the library and there found Tom telling Margie about Dot's trouble.

The young doctor must have been there, too, or heard of it in some way, for he happened in the next morning right after breakfast, and the first thing he said was:

"I'm going to have my bill settled today, little Miss Dot," as with quite a grave face he took out a memoranda.

"Let me see," he mused. "I began coming in May. Two visits a day till—why it's nearly Christmas, isn't it? Now, how much should you think it would come to?"

"Hundreds!" said poor little Dot faintly.

"We want to be businesslike," said Dr. Cogswell. "Suppose you get your slate and figure it."

Dot ran. "He isn't going to let us off a penny," she moaned.

"Now, let's do a little sum in arithmetic," said the doctor. "What does M. stand for?"

"One thousand," said staggered little Dot, pushing the crochet work way down in her pocket.

"Very good," said the doctor. "Now, what does C. stand for?"

"One hundred," said Dot, trying to be brave.

"And altogether?" was the next question.

"Eleven hundred," said Dot tearfully.

"H'm!" coughed Dr. Cogswell. "Now, can you think of anything else they might stand for?"

"No, sir," said Dot.

"Why, yes, you can, Dot!" cried Donald, who had just been wheeled into the room. "M. C.!" clapping his hands. "Why, Merry Christmas! Don't you see?"

Dot smiled.

"Then there isn't any bill?" she asked Tom.

"Nary a bill," said Tom, "but can't you think of anything else the letters might stand for?"

"No," said happy, stupid little Dot.

"I can!" cried Don, catching sight of some glances being exchanged and Margie's pretty cheeks aglow. "Margie Cogswell!"

Then they all laughed, and the doctor caught Dot up and set her on his shoulder and pranced with her into the cozy sitting room. Pretty soon Don was wheeled into the sunny bay window, and there they all sat the rest of the morning.

Dot had to submit to a good deal of teasing, but she was very happy notwithstanding and wrote in her diary that night in such big letters that she went right over two or three of the following days:

"The doctor wasn't coming to see Donnie, after all, and there wasn't any bill. I am going to be bridesmaid and wear white. There isn't any little sister but me, and I'm going to have the little blue room whenever I want to go there to visit."

SONOMA INDEX-TRIBUNE

Sonoma, Jan. 8, 1910.

H. H. GRANICE, Editor.

Boost the World's Fair.

It is up to the interior of the State, as well as the bay cities, to boost the World's Fair which is to be the drawing card of 1915 for the West. It is a splendid undertaking to have been launched by San Francisco but none too gigantic, for San Franciscans have shown themselves capable of fine mettle in having carried to successful completion so many attractive celebrations since the great disaster of four years ago.

With the ample time in which to prepare for the Panama Exposition and with the encouragement and help to be expected from every quarter of the State, California will out-do her many former triumphs with the holding of this celebration fraught with so much importance to the development and expansion of our country.

Incidentally let us mention the importance of making a display of some kind from this section, and let us plan early for the splendid opportunity Sonoma Valley will have to call the world's attention to our desirabilities. At the recent State Fair Sonoma county did not make half the showing she might. Let us not do things by halves in 1915, but plan for something in keeping with our beauty and resources.

Local Capital Stimulated.

The stimulation of local capital brought about by the exploiting of enterprises necessary for the carrying on of business in Sonoma Valley is a splendid thing for the community. It will be the means of keeping money at home which every season has gone to enrich other towns which had more enterprise and forethought than had Sonoma. Business men here have long felt anxious to promote something substantial and to finance home enterprise, but year after year we have been buying from the outside what might be made here at home because various propositions never got beyond the hot air stages.

The brewery, ice plant, creamery and cold storage plants combined was a proposition that was backed up by figures that were convincing to make the enterprise a go.

Here is Something for You to Think About.

[Editorial San Francisco Examiner, January 1st.]

In 1909, the year closing, prohibition was certainly at its height in the United States. What was the result as regards the drinking of alcohol?

There is no guesswork, of course, about it, for the United States Government, with its beer tax and its tax on spirits, keeps absolute track of the brewing and distilling industries.

In October 1909, the people drank less beer by 200,000 barrels than they drank in the same month in 1908.

In October, 1909, the people of the United States drank more ardent spirits--whiskey, gin, brandy, etc.—by 1,500,000 gallons—than they did in October, 1908.

In a hundred gallons of beer you get three gallons of pure alcohol on the average.

In a hundred gallons of spirituous liquors you get FIFTY gallons of alcohol.

Do you think it is a good thing for the people of the United States to cut down their consumption of beer by 200,000 barrels, and increase their consumption of whisky by 1,500,000 gallons?

A free public laundry is being advocated by a sanitary city of the East. The municipal wash-woman would be a new creation for the cartoonists.

Plans for the New Brewery Building.

Plans and specifications for the new building to be erected by the Sonoma Brewing Co., inc., have already been prepared. The main building will be of stone and concrete and three stories in height. Ground for the foundation will be broken as soon as the plans are approved.

TRUE TO DUTY TO THE LAST

Engineer Rosini Instantly Killed and Fireman Cameron Fatally Burned---Latter Meets His Death in Pathetic Manner.

A frightful accident happened on the Southern Pacific railroad last Tuesday morning, whereby a brave engineer was instantly killed and a devoted fireman was fatally scalded and burned.

Seated in the cab of an extra engine which they had secured at South Vallejo to replace the one which had broken down on the regular run, the engine suddenly left the rails between that point and Napa Junction and toppled over. Engineer Rosini was caught beneath the engine and his life crushed out instantly. Fireman Cameron, however, managed to disengage himself from the wreckage and with clothes a-fire seized a red flag and running down the track planted it between the rails and flagged an on-coming train, devoted to his duty almost to the very last. He then became delirious and was wandering aimlessly about when he was discovered by two women who assisted him into a house near-by and summoned assistance. It was too late, however, to save the poor fellow's life, as he was frightfully burned and scalded all over his body.

The cause of the engine, which was unattached, leaving the rails is unknown. The engine affer toppling over tore up several rails and then went down an eight-foot embankment.

The accident delayed the arrival of the morning train at El Verano until late in the afternoon.

The Hay Market.

Somers & Co. of San Francisco report in their statement for the week ending January 4th, that there has been no material increase in hay arrivals during the past week on the San Francisco market, the total showing 2250 ton in comparison with 2020 last week and 2240 for the week preceding. Although it was generally conceded that trade would be better after the first of the year, still it is too soon as yet to expect any material development in this connection. Monday's receipts of over 1000 ton were quite readily absorbed, the market showing no weakness. Choice wheat hay has been in limited supply during the past few days and as the market generally takes its range from the selling of the choice grades we are not able at the moment to report particularly encouraging prices.

The prevailing cold weather throughout the State is necessitating the feeding of considerable hay and the mountain districts are beginning to call on our principal hay districts for supplies.

The movement of hay North, which is principally with alfalfa still continues. Although a portion of this inquiry has developed because of the switchmen's strike on the Northern lines, yet the general shortage of alfalfa throughout the Northwest will probably mean continued business for us throughout the remainder of the season.

The United States Government has finally consented to experiment further with California hay and is now shipping 250 ton to Manila for this purpose. After a careful test has been made we are convinced that California will again be recognized and business with the Philippines made possible.

LAKEVILLE HORSE THIEF CONVICTED.

Tell-Tale Evidence Secured by Deputy Sheriff Ryan Convinces Jury in Ten Minutes.

Emile De Angelo, who entered a stable on the Foster ranch at Lakeville some weeks ago and stole a valuable horse, was convicted of grand larceny in Judge Seawell's department of the Superior Court last Tuesday.

The jury were out only ten minutes in reaching their verdict, as the evidence, which was for the most part circumstantial, left no doubt whatever as to the man's guilt.

De Angelo was captured the day after he stole the animal and made off with it. Deputy Sheriff Ryan after being notified of the disappearance of the horse hastened to the Foster ranch and got upon the trail of the man on the morning following the theft and before night had recovered the horse and ran De Angelo down within a few miles of the Foster ranch and landed him in jail here.

The strongest evidence against De Angelo was that secured by the vigilant deputy. It consisted of a coat with a portion of the lining torn out and a pair of shoes with one of the shoe strings missing. These were found bound around the stolen horse's leg, which had been badly cut in a barbed wire fence while the accused was making his get-away with the stolen animal in the darkness of the night. He had used them to bandage up the animal's leg and stanch the flow of blood.

The jury was composed of Wm. D. Wiley, Jacob Miller, John F. McCombs, J. S. Coon, Harry W. Cummings, E. R. Sawtelle, W. H. Knowles, John Elliott, John K. Wright, J. W. Gladden, D. D. Sinclair and Abraham Van Wyck.

The witnesses called for the prosecution were Joe Kearns, D. B. Bolla, G. Della Maria, Jesse F. Thorsen, Augustus Agnelda, Joe F. Ryan and H. G. Sinclair.

A. Agneda, Carlo Antagnetti and the defendant took the witness stand in behalf of the defense.

At the conclusion of the trial and the recording of the verdict, Superior Judge Emmet Seawell addressing the jury said:

"Well, gentlemen, I suppose about all I can say to compensate you for the attention you have given this case is that you are the first jury to sit in the new court house."

The jurymen smiled. Not so with the prisoner. He sat dejectedly enough, and while there was no question as to his guilt he doubtless had hope in a chance of a disagreement.

The past week has been the coldest ever experienced in the history of this county. The thermometer has varied between 22 and 27 degrees above zero every morning the past week. To a people unprepared for such a low temperature in the valleys of California this cold wave has been as severe to us as the below zero record on the other side of the Rocky Mountains. The cold snap is not confined to any particular section but reports from all parts of Calfornia and the East say that it is a record breaker.

at the office of the County Clerk of said Sonoma county, who is ex-officio Clerk of this Board, and which said office is situated in the Court House, in the City of Santa Rosa, in said county.

The construction of said work is to be commenced in good faith within not more than four (4) months from the date of granting of the franchise, and shall be completed within not more than three (3) years thereafter, and if not so commenced and completed within such times, respectfully, said franchise, right, privilege and permission shall be forfeited; provided that for good cause shown the Board of Supervisors of said County of Sonoma may by resolution extend the time for completion of said work not exceeding three (3) months.

The successful bidder and grantee of said franchise, right, privilege and permission, his heirs and assigns, must, during the life of said franchise, pay to said County of Sonoma two (2) per cent of the gross annual receipts arising from the use, operation and possession of said franchise; provided, however, that no percentage shall be paid for the first five years succeeding the date of said franchise, but thereafter such percentage shall be payable annually, and in the event that said payments is not made, said franchise shall be forfeited. At the end of the sixth year from the date of granting of said franchise, and at the end of each year thereafter the person, firm or corporation then owning or holding said franchise must make and file with the Clerk of the Board of Supervisors of said county a sworn statement of the gross receipts arising from the use, operation and possession of said franchise for the year then ending, and if a corporation then owns the franchise, the Secretary of such corporation is hereby designated as the officer who shall make such sworn statement on behalf of such corporation.

The successful bidder and grantee of said franchise, right, privilege and permission, his heirs and assigns, must, during the life of said franchise, furnish to said County of Sonoma, free of charge, water from the pipes maintained thereunder, for the purpose of sprinkling all the County Roads along the lines of pipe, upon which pipes are laid; such water to be delivered through stand-pipes put in by the county along said pipe-lines where desired.

That it is proposed to grant said franchise, right, privilege and permission in accordance with the terms of an ordinance marked "Exhibit A" and made a part of the resolution authorizing the sale of the said franchise, and directing notice thereof to be given by the Clerk of the Board of Supervisors, adopted on the 5th day of January, 1910, and now on file with the Clerk of said Board, to which resolution and order reference is hereby made for further particulars.

That said bids are to be opened on the

on said day, and that then and there said franchise will be struck off, sold and awarded to the person, firm or corporation who shall make the highest cash bid therefor; provided only that at the time of opening of said bids, any responsible person, firm or corporation present or represented may bid for said franchise or privilege, a sum not not less than ten (10) per cent above the highest sealed bid therefor, and said bid so made may be raised not less than ten (10) per cent by any other responsible bidder, and said bidding may so continue until finally said franchise shall be struck off, sold and awarded by said Board of Supervisors to the highest bidder therefor in gold coin of the United States. Each sealed bid shall be accompanied with cash or a certified check payable to the Treasurer of said County of Sonoma for the full amount of said bid, and no sealed bid shall be considered unless such cash or check is enclosed therewith, and the successful bidder shall deposit at least ten (10) per cent of the amount of his bid with the Clerk of said county before the franchise shall be struck off to him. And, if he shall fail to make such deposit immediately, then and in that case his bid shall not be received and shall be considered as void, and the said franchise shall then and there be again offered for sale to the bidder who shall make the highest cash bid therefor, subject to the same conditions as to deposit as above mentioned. Said procedure shall be had until said franchise is struck off, sold and awarded to a bidder who shall make the necessary deposit of at least ten (10) per cent of the amount of his bid therefor, as herein provided. Said successful bidder shall deposit with the Clerk of the said County of Sonoma within twenty-four hours of the acceptance of his bid, the remaining ninety (90) per cent of the amount thereof, and in case he or it should fail to do so, then the said deposit theretofore made shall be forfeited, and the award of said franchise shall be void and the said franchise shall then and there by said governing Board be again offered for sale to the highest bidder therefor, in the same manner and under the same restrictions, as hereinbefore provided, and in case said bidder shall fail to deposit with the clerk of said county the remaining ninety (90) per cent of his bid within twenty-four hours after its acceptance, the award to him of said franchise will be set aside, and the deposit theretofore made by him shall be forfeited, and no further proceedings for a sale of said franchise shall be had, unless the same shall be re-advertised, and again offered for sale in the manner hereinbefore provided.

The successful bidder for said franchise and privilege must within five (5) days after such franchise is awarded to him, file a bond running to said County of Sonoma, with at least two good and sufficient sureties to be approved by said Board of Supervisors, in the penal sum of Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00), conditioned that such bidder shall well and truly observe, fulfill and perform each and every term and condition of such franchise, and that in case of any breach of condition of such bond, the whole amount of said penal sum shall be taken and deemed to be liquidated damages, and shall be recoverable from the principal and sureties upon said bond. That upon the filing and approval of said bond, the said franchise shall by said Board of Supervisors be granted by ordinance to the person, firm or corporation to whom it has been struck off, sold or awarded, and in case that said bond shall not be so filed, the award of said franchise shall be set aside, and any money paid therefor shall be forfeited, and said franchise shall, in the discretion of said Board of Supervisors be readvertised and again offered for sale in the same manner and under the same restrictions as hereinbefore provided.

This notice is given and published in pursuance of a resolution and order of the said Board of Supervisors of said County of Sonoma, authorizing the same, adopted at a regular meeting of said Board, held on the 5th day of January, 1910.

Dated January 5th, 1910.

F. L. WEIGHT,
County Clerk of the County of Sonoma, State of California, and ex-officio Clerk of said Board of Supervisors.

The Wonderful Camel.

When the nature of the work performed by the camel is considered it is perhaps its very somnolent organization which best fits it for that work and which gives color to the accusations of laziness and stupidity made against it. It can live on a diet as appetizing as "a green umbrella," to use Sir Samuel Baker's words. Barren, leafless twigs, dried shrubs and the tough, paperlike substances of the dome palm form the chief courses in the menu prepared by nature for this denizen of the desert. The marvelous arrangement for the retaining of a supply of water sufficient to last for many days makes the camel's powers of endurance phenomenal. The ordinary freight camel is expected to carry a load of from 500 to 1,000 pounds across the desert at the rate of twenty-five miles a day and to keep it up for three days without a fresh supply of water. Some will cover fifty miles a day for five days without water, and the swifter species will carry their riders 100 miles a day.—London Spare Moments.

The Humming Bird's Flight.

The flight of the little humming bird is more remarkable than that of the eagle. We can understand the flapping of the eagle's immense wing supporting a comparatively light body. But our little bird has a plump body. His wings are not wide, but long, so he must move them rapidly to sustain his weight, and this he can do to perfection. The vibrations of his wings are so rapid as to make them almost invisible. He can use them to sustain himself in midair, with his body as motionless as if perched on a twig. In this way he can sip the nectar of the delicate, fine stemmed flowers without alighting for a moment. He never alights while so engaged. He moves from flower to flower with a graceful and rapid movement, sometimes chasing away a bee or humming bird moth, of which he is very jealous. Nor is he much more favorably impressed with any small birds that seem in his way. He knows his power of flight, and he has no fear of any other bird.—St. Nicholas.

A Garrick Incident.

The picture of Garrick in the witness box, tongue tied and smothered with confusion, is an amazing one, for Garrick where speaking was concerned was the pride of London. Members of parliament envied him his powers. Burke envied him. There is that instance in parliament when during a heated debate a member moved that the gallery be cleared. This was ordered to be done, and the strangers withdrew, all save Garrick. Still the member objected. Then up spake Burke. Would it be fair to exclude from their debate the master of eloquence, the genius who taught them the art of speaking? he demanded. For himself he was proud to acknowledge his indebtedness to Garrick. Fox followed in the same strain. And Townshend. The house then voted that the "stranger should remain." And Garrick did not budge!—St. James' Gazette.

Mexican Tidbits.

Water bugs and worms are among the tidbits in which the Mexican peon delights. He catches his bugs as they skim along the top of fresh water ponds, drying them and then eating them with as much zest as an American boy eats peanuts. As near as the peon can explain it, their flavor is something on the order of the chestnut, but as no white man has ever tried eating water bugs or, if he has, doesn't dare confess it, the exact taste of these Mexican morsels can't be described very accurately. The peons dote, too, on the nice fat pulque worm. This insect is about two inches long and half an inch thick. They fry the dainty in grease and pack it in brown paper packages of a dozen worms, which bring 2 cents a paper. An industrious pulque worm collector makes a good living.—New York World.

Turkey's Unit of Value.

In Turkey the unit of value is the piastre, which is divided into 40 paras, while the para is divided into 3 aspes. As the piastre is worth only 4.4 cents, the para is worth a little more than a tenth of a cent, and an aspe is worth a trifle over one twenty-seventh of a cent. When an American in Turkey wants to feel rich he goes forth and buys some 2,700 aspes, which he spends with lavish hand over the bargain counters of the oriental bazaars.

Johnson on Poverty.

Poverty, my dear friend, is so great an evil and pregnant with so much temptation and so much misery that I cannot but earnestly enjoin you to avoid it. Live on what you have; live if you can on less. Do not borrow either for vanity or pleasure. The vanity will end in shame and the pleasure in regret.—Samuel Johnson.

Henry's Followers.

"Give me liberty or give me death!"

"Patrick Henry was a great man. He has followers by the thousands."

"Indeed! Among the orators, statesmen and patriots, I suppose?"

"Well, more frequently among the great mass of mismated."—Boston Herald.

The Game of Golf.

Farmer Barnes — There's one good thing about golf anyhow. Farmer Fallows (skeptically)—What's that? Farmer Barnes—Why, ye don't have to play it if ye don't want to.—London Scraps.

His Voice.

Polly Pinklights—What sort of voice has the new tenor? Fanny Footlights Bum! You can almost see through the crack in it.—Philadelphia Record.

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a costitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
